Aquittal of Young Foster.

In our Circuit Court of last week, Judge Hall presiding, Frank D. Foster was tried for the killing of William Cox. The case was duly conducted on both sides. For the prosecution, Thornburg and Nelson appeared, and for the defense Maynard and Baker. After examining many witnesses pro and con, and after a thorough discussion by the court, and an able charge by the Court, the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal. The fact being established that Foster did kill Cox in open day, in Knoxville, and that the jury acquitted him, has called forth upon an honest and intelligent jury the bitter denunciations of many rebels and copperheads, and demands at our hands a statement of the leading facts in the case, and a vindication of the jury.

Young Foster and his father, from the commencement of the rebellion, and throughout its progress, have been loyal to the Government of the United States, and gave our army many valuable information after Burnside came in, disclosing where rebel stores were to be found, and by what route the rebel army was approaching under Longstreet, and hence their destruction was resolved upon. Honest Foster, the father, was seized in his house about daylight, by Gober's rebel scouts—taken within a half mile of the house of Cox, robbed of his money, shot through the hip, and driven, bleeding and stripped of his clothes, through the water up to his armpits. The mother of young Foster was in bed sick when the father was taken out, and from the shock received she died, leaving nine children, most of them small and helpless girls. Young Foster, not then grown, was boundwhacked within two miles of the house of Cox, the horse shot on which he was riding, and one bullet penetrating his clothes.

Now the reader may wish to know what Cox had to do with all this. Mr. Cox was a wealthy and influential man, an original, active, bitter, talking Democrat. He lived a close neighbor to Foster in Blount county, and was the controlling spirit in his neighborhood. He had South when Burnside came in—it returned, acting as a guide when Longstreet came, and was well acquainted with the country. He again left when Longstreet left. While the rebel force lay in Blount, as was proven on a former trial, Cox pointed out to them Foster's position, and had him robbed of all he had, and his wife, in female health, made to cook for the lewd gray backs about fifteen days. It was proven upon the trial that Cox had threatened the lives of both Foster and son, and when killed by young Foster he had on his person a six-shooter, well loaded, as the witness who took charge of the weapon.

To be candid, in view of the prescriptive course of rebels towards the Foster family, and of their cruelty, our only astonishment is that young Foster did not do more killing than he did! And as for the outcry against this jury, it is worthy of remark that when Knox county juries have acquitted rebels guilty of shooting in the hanging of Union men, falsely imprisoning them, and hurrying them to their graves, those same men, now so indignant, have loaded these juries to the skies for their intelligence and impartiality!

When Jones, a true and loyal man, was hanged assassinated on these streets by a most cowardly and dastardly villain, the Confederate Attorney, Ramsey, endorsed the horrid act, declared it a justable act, and applied to the rebel authorities to turn the murderer out of jail, and he was set at liberty! This same Ramsey now thinks the jury that acquitted Foster is guilty of a great outrage! The nucleus of these rebels is intolerable. And in East Tennessee they seem to have lost sight of the fact that they are not the majority. If they truly believe themselves, and accept of the situation of affairs they brought upon the country, they should be alone, but if they are in the old domineering spirit of the rebellion, and propose to braw-beat men, they should be met by loyal men in the same spirit, and taught the gracious lesson of moderation!

No care for Foster's jury is concerned, they are loyal, sensible and honest men, and will be sustained by the virtue and intelligence of the country. The following is a list of their names:

F. Schade, J. D. Farmer, Nathaniel Bird, Charles Walker, James Lacy, A. Hunter, J. W. Blair, L. L. Stansbury, L. M. Myatt, J. W. Bird, H. D. Myatt, James L. Turner.

They threaten to publish the testimony in the case. Indeed? Can you, in this way, intimidate juries in the future, and prevent them from doing justice to Union men? Come on with your publications. Some publishing can be done on the other side. Union men are about in the humor to assume and defend their rights, in and out of courts. And when belligerent and willful injustice, will be compelled to do the same thing!

The Whigs—We have had delightful weather throughout the entire month of September and October. Recently, the nights have been cool, with frosty fronts, but the days have been pleasant. This one year ago there was snow, but there was enough to produce snow, in postures and fashions. Drags a whipped and routed army was breaking out of Kentucky, through the mountains, dying by the roadside, some covered with snow and rags, while others, more successful, got out with dry goods, silk stockings, silver ware, negroes and horses. No wonder the snow fell.

The Late Chase—We have raised beautiful crops in most parts of East Tennessee—corn, oats, potatoes, and fruits of all kinds. The wheat was a failure, but an abundance of it has been sown this season, and a fine crop may be expected next fall.

DISCUSSIONS.—We would call attention to the opinion of one of the leading papers of Canada on this subject. Their readers have no doubt heard of the numerous discussions of G. H. Winslow's "Mystic Pills," which appear from time to time in the public press, offering most tempting bait to those who will patronize them. In these there are genuine blessings, but there are a few questionable ones who do not know in this country, and yet do not know the value of the pills. These are worth eight or ten times the money paid for them, while we never hear of or hear of a single article, and not in books concerning their value, which is not fully worth the dollar which it cost. Not this is only the case, but every agent who has ever sold these pills has been compelled to give a discount of 50 per cent. on the price of the pills, and yet still finds it difficult to sell them.

We have seen numbers of prices sent us by the agents for these pills, and there is no doubt that some of the articles are worth eight or ten times the money paid for them, while we never hear of or hear of a single article, and not in books concerning their value, which is not fully worth the dollar which it cost.
